Welcome to the Travelling Art Gallery!

Fine art giclée prints and photographs for sale, digitally and individually reproduced from the largest image library of original, mint condition, railway carriage prints in Britain.

- Over 2500 unique landscape views by leading 20th century artists and photographers, creating unique gifts and a retro décor for home, office, hotel, restaurant and pubs.
- Using these quality reproductions, collect nostalgic views of Britain's best loved, mid 20th century landscapes before the motor car had exerted its baneful influence on the country.
- From fascinating views of towns and cities, to pleasant villages in rural areas; from remote landscapes to the numerous ports and resorts around the coast of Britain and Ireland.

MANY PASSENGERS can still remember the days when their journeys were enhanced by the framed pictures, advertisements and maps that kept them company in their railway compartments.

In the mid-20th century the railway companies used artwork from over 65 leading watercolour and railway poster artists of the era. These included Rowland Hilder, Jack Merriott, Frank H Mason, Leonard Squirrell, James McIntosh Patrick, Henry Rushbury and Claude Buckle, who produced landscapes of Britain to be displayed in their trains as railway carriage prints.

VIEW OVER 2500 IMAGES ONLINE!

Many of the original carriage prints and photographs are now very scarce and numerous people, including preservation societies, art lovers, interior décor designers and fans of a nostalgic and bygone Britain, have requested that images from the Greg Norden Collection be made available to a wider audience, hence the setting up of the Travelling Art Gallery.

The Artists

Stanley Roy Badmin

Kenneth Steel

Jack Merriott

Over 65 artists produced work for carriage prints and many were members of Royal institutes and societies, including the Royal Academy. Britain has been pre-eminent in its contribution of watercolour to the world's art and the list of the artists producing carriage print work for the railways appears a little like a Who's Who of prominent watercolour artists for the period, although a sprinkling of artwork in oils appeared too.

After many years of research, short biographies of the artists are available on our website.

Landscape Prints

Over 400 views of Britain by leading 20th century watercolour artists from the days when trains were travelling art galleries.

Historical Prints

In the 1950s, the London Midland Region of British Rail displayed two series of prints featuring historical scenes.

Photograph Panels

From the late 19th century, the railways displayed unique sepia, black & white and colour-tinted photographs of Britain.

Whitby. From a Watercolour by Rowland Hilder R.I. (1937)

The Collection

During Greg Norden's long battle with M.E., he remembered a pile of old pictures lying, forgotten, under a bed. He had acquired these prints in the 1970s from a railwayman who had saved them from a skip at Waterloo Station when the railways were throwing away piles of redundant posters. After contacting various museums and galleries, it became obvious that little was known about them, so his researches began. One of the great joys in the process of investigating the subject has been the involvement with many of the artists and their relatives, and the friendships that have developed along the way.

The railways kept no real records of which images were utilized, so it has taken years of detective work, prayer (!) and contacting other collectors, to finally piece together and produce his completed listing of all prints issued since 1923. Many have survived after being displayed in railway carriages, but these tend to be faded and stained. Collecting unused prints in excellent original condition has therefore been his target. Over the years he has tracked down and added photograph panels to the portfolio and now has the largest collection in the country.
